“Decision Making and the Brain”

William Hedgcock
Department of Marketing

Discussion Leader: You will lead one class discussion during the semester. There are two parts to being a discussion leader.

a. First, you must send a brief study guide to your classmates by Sunday night before class. This study guide should include a one to two paragraph summary of the reading and some questions that your classmates should be prepared to answer. I will provide an example of a study guide.

b. Second, you must lead the class discussion. You will be in charge of starting the class discussion. It is best for you to start with a brief discussion about the chapter. You can use PowerPoint if you think that will help. Then start critically discussing the materials. You should allow other classmates to participate and any criticisms should be constructive and not personal.